

Abstract

A method and plug for separating fluids in subterranean wells is provided. The plug enters a passage at an interface of successively introduced fluids. The plug comprises an outer body and a detachable inner mandrel attached to the outer body. An Assembly comprising a plurality of plugs may also be used, in which case the plurality of plugs releasably attach to each other.